

FORTUNE

SMALL BUSINESS

Obama's Plan
Tax cuts for big corporations, hikes for entrepreneurs

» PAGE 14

Make Sleep Work for You

New research proves that fatigue —rampant in hard times— is bad for business. See how 7 CEOs get ROI from rest.

» PAGE 84

No sheep (or small-business owners) were harmed in the staging of this photo.

INVENTION
A New Source of Cheap Energy?

» PAGE 29

Oyster Bamboo's Fly Rods

BY SCOTT BOWEN

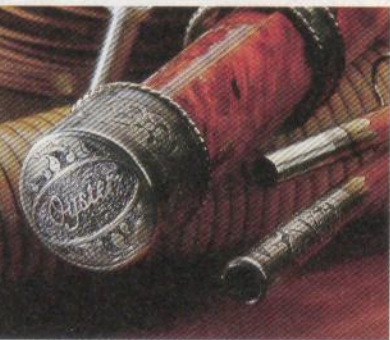

THE SMOOTH PERfection of Bill Oyster's bamboo fly rods betrays nothing of the Wyoming native's chaotic path to his calling. Oyster, 37, studied art and engineering in college before dropping out to concentrate on professional bicycle racing. While training for the 1996 Olympic trials, he crashed and broke most of the bones in his torso. After recovering, he joined his in-laws' construction business in Gainesville, Ga. "My wife crafting his own rods. A year later the Atlanta Journal and Constitution published an article about Oyster's products, spurring so many requests that he decided to jump in full-time.

SOUTHERN FLIES Bill Oyster tests his fishing rods on the Soque River in Clarkesville, Ga.

Bamboo's suppleness allows anglers fishing in small creeks and rivers to make more accurate short casts. Today there is a two-year waiting list for an Oyster rod. Each one got used to having me around," he says.

But Oyster had always loved fly-fishing. During his downtime as a cyclist, he worked as a fishing guide and gave fly-fishing lessons to balance the mental intensity of bike racing. Oyster began researching bamboo rods in 1998 and was so attracted to the material that he decided to start requires nearly 100 hours of labor: Oyster cuts six triangular bamboo strips, tapering the ends to less than the width of a toothpick. The pieces are glued together and then flame-tempered and dipped in varnish. The rods, used by President Jimmy Carter and other devoted anglers, run from $3,700 to $5,000. oysterbamboo.com

ANDY ANDERSON, CHUCK PITTMAN